I've been thinking about this for a long time. The first time I did was when I ran into a friend of mine, from South Africa, born and raised in Johannesburg. He is Dutch origin, tall, blond, blue eyes; all underlined his statement: “I think I am the first African American you have ever met”. The second of my three piece puzzle was my visit to St. Lucia, a Caribbean Island; roughly 80%-20% black/white population. And, of course the “ever-lasting third piece” is squarely occupied by people such as Ali Sharpton, Jesse Jackson, B. Hussein Obama, Elijah Cummings, Henry Waxman, Charlie Wrangleand others (let's call them the “Last Option Team, or ‘LOT’”) and their garbage they have been jamming down the (sufficiently dumb) public's throat.

I was not born in the US; I was born in Hungary. Spent 32 years there, and I have been a proud, Constitutional Conservative citizen of this great country for 23 solid years. I have been supporting veterans and the police, to a point that I regularly pick up tabs in restaurants if I see police or a military person eating there. My only condition to the waiter is anonymity. It might also be interesting to know that in my 28 years in the US (first five to citizenship) I was unemployed once. The company went bankrupt, I was called at home by the president; “don't come to work tomorrow”. I did not ever, not for a minute considered showing up in the Unemployment Office. I had no face for it. I knew I could have, but I also knew I would lose any and all self respect if I did. I borrowed money, and gave it back later with interest.

With that:

I have been watching this flea circus what the so-called leaders of the black community in the US have been doing, in the name of “not wanting to be offensive”. I am referring to the “If you are black, we will call you African American” idea. To say this is counterproductive and retarded, it is being overly polite. Here are a few reasons, just off the cuff:

- What if Jimmy (a black man) moved to Houston from Barbados? Would he be an “African American?”
- What if Jimmy's parents moved from St. Thomas to London and Jimmy was born in London? Would he be an “African American?”
- As I mentioned, I was born in Hungary; I have friends from Italy, Poland, Greece, Russia, China, Germany and many other countries in the city I live. No one has ever, not once did or attempted to call me a “Hungarian American”. I have been a proud “American”. Not to mention the fact, that I would be pissed out of my mind if anyone attempted to do so. This goes for my friends too. Now, let me ask: how idiotic, degrading, taking any and all pride away, plant as much inferiority complex as possible, to call someone, who was born in America an “African American?”
- How dumb the population has to be accepting this, without being up in arms against this idiocy?

The other issue, directly tight to this one was my Caribbean experience. We went to the island, stayed in a first-class resort. The family that owns the resort is white; beside them, no one (I mean: “no-one”) was white. From the top general manager, through the front desk people all the way to the waiters and waitresses who served drinks and food in the beach bar; black. The taxi driver, who picked us up (a young man, 29 year of age); black. The owner of the taxi company he worked at; black.

The first idea comes to mind is “there is a white family staking their entire fortune on an operation, being run by blacks”.

The next observation I did: the entire resort, was running like a Swiss watch. Everyone was elegantly dressed, kind, extremely nice, hospitality was their passion; Charles, the taxi driver was at the airport on time, and subsequent to that, he picked us up four more times to take us around the island. If Charles said “I will be there at 9:00am”, he was not there at 8:58; he was there at 9:00. Beside all the positive attributes they showed us, there were two, which towered over everything else: their dignity and their pride doing the particular job they were doing.

Now, since I know readers coming from American public schools under the concept of “outcome based education” still do not get where I am going with this, let me formulate it real quick.

- Apparently (according to LOT), American blacks die hungry, cannot get cloths on their back and they will permanently live on the streets if the government did not help them from cradle to grave. They are only good for rioting against the bad white man, and -while they are rioting anyway- break into stores and take everything they can. Then comes Ali Sharpton to explain it, Jesse to march on the street, and blackmail a few companies while being there, and Hussein who says if he had a son, he would look like the <<<next black guy who either killed someone, or died during wanting to do it>>>.
- I have visited enough Caribbean island to understand the concept of “Island Time”; meaning “Man, it happens when it happens”. Jamaica (where I saw more whites than anywhere else) is the main “Island Time” hub. And you know what: I was in Geneva, Switzerland not long ago, and the taxi driver was three minutes late. This never happened in St.Lucia.
- While we were riding with Charles, the taxi driver, we talked about “health care” on the island (he, having gone through a heart surgery, had in-depth knowledge). In so many words, he said, there is no “government healthcare” for anyone under 65 on the island. You pay for it. My wife asked “what if you don’t have the money?” I never forget Charles’ reply: “Well it is your responsibility to make sure you are OK. If you don’t have the money, your family will have to raise it”
- Then we flew back, and landed in Miami. The composition of the people at the airport (as a whole, including restaurants, and other facilities) was roughly 30% black, 50% Hispanic and 20% white.
 - The baggage carousel got stuck from a piece of luggage –it took someone 20 min to show up;
 - We went to a restaurant (you know, a few tables, maybe a TGI level if I am pushing it) found probably six tables unoccupied (representing 50% of the capacity). The white waitress was standing a front of it, telling us “you need to wait a few minutes for an available table”. I said “Honey, I see six”. Listen to the reply, because I have not heard this one in 61 years: “Those are for parties of three or four” (while there was no one beside us) –we left her standing there, not understanding what is our problem.
 - We went to another one, exclusively labored by Hispanics. The non-service, the arrogant ignorance were through the roof --if you were white. Because all of them were very kind and service oriented to each other and to people who spoke Spanish.

Now, let me string this together, so even liberals and outcome-base education alumni will understand it.

- While community organizer conmen such as Hussein Obama, and hate merchant street rats such like Ali Sharpton making a fine living on
 - Degrading blacks calling them “African American”,
 - Pulling the rug from under them not teaching them “It is simple: the police officer tell you to raise your hands, you raise your hands. You will have time to deal with him later, on court”,
 - Not teaching them responsibility, self-reliance, work ethics, and pride (in short “just try to fulfill the basic criteria to be counted as a “human being”),
 - Pounding the “Everybody and their uncles owe you everything you desire” lie into them, --there are entire black populations in this world, who think and live by the opposite concept. These populations think “you have to work to make a living” and “you are responsible for yourself”.

- So, if the above is true, then we must conclude, this is not “black/white” issue, it is not “blacks are a lower class”, it is not “whites hate blacks”, it is not a creed/color issue at all; it is pure and simple mindless liberal madness is running rampant in this country. It is the intentional dumbing the population to gain easy control over them. It is the fact that Hussein Obama created a roughly 100 million “voting block” hanging on to government aid. This is under the headings of “99 weeks”, “ObamaCare”, and “Immigration”. It is the lack of conservative society issue where each citizen has responsibility. The list of reasons, would stretch far out from the frame of this piece, so just a few of them:
 - The American public education system that had become trash due to the Teachers Union’s all but criminally negligent activities;
 - The Department of Education
 - The liberal “you only have rights but no responsibilities” mirage
 - The liberal “you always will someone to blame for your mistakes” delusion
 - The “we cannot offend anyone” idiocy which led to “we are offending everybody”
 - The almost complete elimination of religion from the society
 - The complete elimination of “being proud to be an American” patriotism
 - And much-much more.

But, this is not a black/white issue, that’s for sure.
