

March 29, 2016

The way how the GOP is shaping up for November is nothing short of tragic. I always thought, people who vote “democratic” (which has nothing to do with the “Democratic Party” JFK had), are doing so as a result of severe mental deficiency; in 2012, I had to realize that (upon they holding their noses against Romney, staying at home, thereby reinstalling Obama into the WH) the definition shall be extended to GOP voters too. As a result of the Reince Pribeus lead GOP administration’s idiocy and impotency, compounded by most GOP political figures’ self interest driven maneuvers, the unable to think republican voters are now ready to sink the GOP at the November election and the United States of America with it.

Full disclosure: on one side of the spectrum, throughout the cycle, I was a Scott Walker supporter. On the other side, I from day one was deadly afraid of Jeb Bush and Ted Cruz. Not because anything is wrong with them; I just learned to size up the GOP voting public’s IQ in 2012. I have been saying from day one: these two will surely lose the election.

So, this piece is to try to talk some sense into the voters in November. So let me throw up bullet points, just on a “food for thought” basis.

- Probably “the” most ridiculous statement I have been hearing and people (like a herd) go “yep, that’s correct” is “The Donald thinks his deal making skills will work in politics”. In this statement, people spit out “deal making” like they spat deadly bacteria on you. Folks, let me just remind you: POLITICS = DEAL. The same people (especially: media) who for decades have been applauding “Reagan negotiated with Gorbachev”, “The Senate negotiated with the White House”, The Senate and the House are in Conference to see how will they come up with a unified proposal” “the” very same people now try to explain to the public why The Donald’s deal-making skills are not applicable.

Then what the hell you people have been doing for decades? Decades?? Let me remind you, that the US Constitution was a giant deal making.But the GOP voter herd goes “Yep, deal making is no good”.

- Another issue that stuck in my mind is “The Donald is a bully.” Folks, this guy received a small amount of money (I remember reading $10M in a credible material –it was years ago, don’t ask me which. He talks about “$1M”, but whatever the number may be, it is definitely not “$400M, that some media garbage claims) from his father and built a several billion dollar empire. But here is the kicker: he didn’t build his billions as Bill Gates, or Steve Jobs (nothing wrong with them either); he didn’t build a software, hardware or both, sold it in some astronomical numbers and gained billions in the process. Nope, he built it one lot, one structure, one hotel, one club at a time. What’s the difference? Well he had to negotiate with a wide range of cultures, governments, religions, economy models, etc. around the world. As much the US government’s agency that holds millions of square feet worth of building and cannot care less if they are used or not,.... other governments are the same. Government people are government people around the world. So now, The Donald comes in, figures out what to say, how to say, what to give and what to hold back ...and gets the permit, and cooperation. Around the world. Across dozens of stupid, lazy government people, sleazy, corrupt religions, various societies with various interests, etc. And he gets the deal done.

So, here is my question gang: what if what if we have “the” only guy on our hands, who has negotiating, consummate deal-making skills not seen since LBJ?? What if he will prove to be the only one who can bring the two sides of the House and Senate together? Since he is not a hardliner on either side, don't you think it is a potential possibility?

March 29, 2016

- Here is another point I want to throw at you: there are a lot (I mean: in the millions) capable, highly intelligent, hard working people in this world struggling, don't know how he/she will get from one month to the next. But, he/she refuses to work for someone else, for 3-4 times more of the money, with vacation, with less than 3% of the problems, headaches, worries and aggravations he/she has today. Their common tag is: ENTREPRENEUR These pore bastards (yours truly included), just have an idea, and an Eifel Tower size drive (no, not "ego"; a drive) that he/she can do it better, faster, smaller, shinier, sweeter, –take your pick. This is their only reason they don't go to work for IBM, Dow Chemical, Exxon, or Blue Cross.

So now, take The Donald; I would bet anything I have, that this US presidency thing is a "PROJECT" for him. He has convinced himself, that he can do a far better job than anyone that this country needs him, and he is "the" one who can fix it. I have no doubt, The Donald is not, and will not be doing this from ego, for his name. And here is another prediction: he will work himself to the bone to prove (no, not to you, not to his family, and not to his friends: prove it to himself ... that he can do this; --which is another sure trademark of the aforementioned "pore bastards").

So now, add all these up. Add that

- The Donald will be (if he got there) "the" most unapologetic "America First" president since President Reagan. A guy, whose heart and actions are with the US military, and the United States of America as a whole,
- He brought millions of people into the voting booths, who will stay at home, if this idiotic GOP tries to be a slime against The Donald,
- First time since Reagan, 20% of a GOP candidate's voting block is democrat
- He figured out how to beat 14 out of 17 candidates. I would bet a modest sum, he will figure out how to make peace with the GOP leadership and the people who oppose him today.

Folks, the fact is this: we do not really know The Donald, but we do know Hillary Clinton and her record. We do know how she midwived "the" worst foreign policy record in decades, how she sunk all America friendly dictators, how she was enthusiastic for the Iran deal and against assisting the Ukrainians; and how she lied in every awoken moment in absolutely everything.

So now, you have a known character who will surely take America down, and an unknown character, that cannot possibly be worse than the "known one" and carries the chance to come out good.

Let's not screw this one up folks. This will be a fresh air after eight years with an America hater, socialist, Muslim agent gangster in the White House. And it would be nice if most of you grew brain, and started to think. You have time until November.